FLAG AND THE PRESIDENT

Etiquette in Properly Displaying the Chief Executive's Colors Requires Many Imposing Features.

When the president of the United States goes on board any other ship, his flag is carried at the main, and the ensign flies from the staff astern when in port and from the gaff when at sea.

When the president visits a ship of the United States navy his flag is raised at the main at the moment he reaches the deck and kept flying as long as he is on board. His flag is dramatically lowered simultaneously with the booming of the last gun of the salute. To receive him, the entire corps of officers in special full dress assemble on the side of the quarter deck at which he enters. He is received at the gangway by the flag officer and captain, accompanied by such other officers as may be designated. The yards or rail are manned; the marines paraded; and such of the crew as are not otherwise employed are formed in order forward of the marines. As the chief executive reaches the deck, the officers and men salute, the marine guard presents arms; the drums give four ruffles and the bugles sound four flourishes. The ruffles and flourishes are followed by the national air, during the playing of which the president and all on board stand in impressive silence with uncovered heads. Every United States ship-of-war present, either at the arrival or departure of the present, mans the yards and fires a national salute of 21 guns, which is likewise a salute to the national flag.

So long as the president's flag flies from a ship-of-war, it becomes the senior ship present. Her motions are followed accordingly, and all other United States ships of war on meeting her at sea or elsewhere, and all naval batteries which she passes, must fire a national salute.

One of the most imposing features of an inaugural parade is the dipping of the colors of each regiment as it passes the president's stand. Each time the colors are dipped, the president, with the army and navy officers and all members of the diplomatic corps present, must rise and stand uncovered in acknowledgment of the courtesy.

The president's flag, as that of the head of the army, is crossed with the admiral's flag in the East room decorations when there is a White House reception to the army and navy. These two flags are blended with the stars and stripes and those of all nations when a reception is given the diplomatic corps at the White House. They are never used on any other occasion in the decorations of the executive mansion, except at an inaugural ball, when they are placed in front of the box occupied by the presidential party.

ATTRACT MUCH ATTENTION

Russian Ambassador's Footman is an Interesting Sight Around the Streets of Washington.

One of the most interesting sights around the streets of Washington is the Russian ambassador's carriage with the Cossack footman seated in his proper place. Wherever the carriage goes, people, citizens and visitors stop and take at least a second look at the giant-like Cossack, who is always dressed in his Russian army uniform, with cartridges strung across the front, and a business-like looking revolver swinging in a holster. The accompanying photograph was taken on the principal business thoroughfare of the capital, while Mrs. Bakmeteff, the ambassador's wife, was on a shopping tour. She is shown at the left of the picture.

Everybody Looks.

MacVeagh Quick Lunch Victim.
Secretary of the Treasury Franklin MacVeagh, one of the wealthiest men in the country and the owner of Washington's $1,000,000 house, believes in the simple life, and since the departure of Mrs. MacVeagh for Europe he takes his mid-day meal at a quick lunch place on F street.

The secretary is a familiar figure seated on a stool at the long counter, and his favorite luncheon is a "tongue roll" and a dish of strawberry ice cream. He always carefully polishes the place assigned to him at the food counter with a paper napkin, and places another under his plate.

Red Cross Memorial.

Miss Mabel Boardman of the Red Cross is working for the erection of a building in Washington to commemorate the services and sacrifices of the women of the Civil war. The present plan is to have this building cost about $600,000.

PROPOSE BOOST BOARD

CHARLES FREEMAN JOHNSON
ARRANGING FOR CONVENTION
NEXT SEPTEMBER.

Movement Whereby People of the United States May Finance and Maintain the People's Educational Foundation.

The opposition in the public mind to the establishment by congress of the "Rockefeller Foundation," with its enormous fund, which might result in the control of the entire educational system, has given birth to a movement for the People's Educational Foundation, to be financed and maintained by the people of the United States, the headquarters of which are to be in Washington.

By the organization of people's committees of fifteen or more in every county of each state, local centers of distribution will be maintained with teachers or advisers co-operating with local boards of education and colleges to supplement their work, assisting in the problem of adjusting people to the kind of work for which they have a natural gift.

Vocational training, mechanic arts, agriculture, and self-supporting pursuits will be cultivated. A nation-wide system of ethics will be established as recommended by the National Educational Council at San Francisco, beginning in the kindergartens and primary schools, extending throughout all branches of education and out into the business system of daily life, to cultivate self-reliance, honor, respect for law, and national character.

It is being promoted by the National Legal Reform association, whose objects have been approved by President Taft, Theodore Roosevelt, David Starr Jordan, Mayor Gaynor of New York, Governor Woodrow Wilson, Governor Eugene Foss of Massachusetts, Governor Gilchrist of Florida, Governor Mann of Virginia, Governor Osborn of Michigan, Governor McNeal of Alabama, Governor Wilson of Kentucky, and many prominent persons throughout the country.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition management has extended an invitation to this movement to hold a great people's convention at their exposition in San Francisco in 1915, and similar invitations have been extended by the local board of trade and chamber of commerce to hold the 1912 convention in Washington.

Charles Freeman Johnson, who is organizing this movement as director, is now in Washington, making arrangements for the convention, and he states that 1,000 delegates are expected to attend here in September next.

Mr. Johnson has submitted also to the local board in Washington a plan to increase the influence and activity of all these bodies, by uniting all local interests through the "Washington Development Committee of 200," to be selected from the present joint committee of fine arts and other bodies, adding sufficient representatives of the banking, transportation, hotel and other commercial and social interests to make it thoroughly representative of all interests.

The "Washington Development Committee of 200" will maintain permanent headquarters to conduct an active, continuous publicity campaign through the press and special literature. It will educate the people of the United States to the importance of Washington as the capital of art, culture, finance, and politics, and as the distributive center of educational literature; it will show the national character of the far-sighted plans for the commission and public bodies and it will proceed directly to secure a suitable convention hall, to bring more conventions and visitors to Washington; to improve roads and parks; to secure important legislation from congress and encourage educational movements of a national character tending to make Washington known everywhere as "the most beautiful city in the world"—"the convention city."

Fond of American Candy.
The Duchess Anastasia, daughter of Emperor Nicholas of Russia, is passionately fond of American candy, and it is said that she will eat no other. The Grand Duke Alexis, her brother, who is going to be Czar of all Russia if he lives, thinks there is nothing in the world as good as lemon drops put up in boxes by candy makers of this country. Knowing the "sweet tooth" of these children of the Czar, Hon. Curtis Giles, Jr., who is American ambassador to Russia, on returning to his duties at the court of the Czar the other day, carried one big trunk full of candy to the Grand Duchess and Grand Duke. This was to be presented to the young people on June 18, which is the eleventh birthday anniversary of the Grand Duchess. They are extremely fond of sweet pickles bottled as they are in this country, and as these can not be procured in St. Petersburg he also carried a trunk full of sweet pickles. Accounts do not state, however, that he carried with him a trunk full of lactopepsins.

WEST TENNESSEE

NOT DOING ITS PART

EAST END OF STATE HIGHWAY

NEARS COMPLETION.

PRESIDENT GOWAN'S STORY

Legislature Failed to Provide for an Official Survey, and This Has Had the Effect of Delaying Work on the Road.

Nashville.—The following statement regarding progress in the construction of the Memphis-to-Bristol highway is made public by George A. Gowan, president of the Highway Association:

"To the Citizens of Tennessee:

"After all, the proposed highway from Bristol to Memphis is being built in many of the counties where a new road had to be constructed. East of Nashville we had practically been completed this year, possibly with the exception of two counties. West of Nashville there is some work being done, but the citizens along the route selected have not come up to the promises that were made to secure the official route. The continuous quiet, hard work that some men have done to push the good roads movement to the front all over the state is having its effect. So far as the writer is concerned, he is satisfied. While we could have done more with the co-operation of all, yet we are getting good results in many places.

"If the legislature of the state would have provided for an official state survey, as requested, much of the highway would have now been completed. Thousands of men would have put in two to five days work on the road, as promised, which would have done a whole lot toward building the road. Finally, to get a correct survey, we had to put on a button sale. The result finally up to date is that, with the exception of a few counties and short distances in others, a first-class survey is complete.

"It has been done at a minimum cost. The result of the button sale for the whole state follows:

"Amount received from the sale of buttons, $2,333.

"The majority of the buttons (65 per cent) were sold east of Nashville, therefore, according to agreement, the funds have been divided accordingly. None of this money has been used to pay salaries, because none of us is drawing any salary, except the secretary, and his salary has been used to pay absolute expenses of promoting the work of the commissioners and the engineers. Therefore, division up to date stands as follows:

"Paid to George W. Cline, treasurer of eastern commission, $975.

"Paid to J. B. Walker, treasurer of western commission, $635.

"Paid for promotion and general expense of the association and some expenses of the commission for the last ten months, $635.

"There are a few parties who have not yet made settlement for buttons. As soon as I can get settlement from them, I will make a division of the money they send in. We are under obligations to the federal government for the assistance it has given us in furnishing engineers for this work east of Nashville.

"GEO. A. GOWAN.

"President Memphis-to-Bristol Highway Association."

Lespedeza Crop Big.

Somerville.—The first cuttings of lespedeza hay of the present season's crop were brought to town. The crop of this hay is said to be fine this year and the prospect now is that a large quantity of it will be harvested. The present high price will be an inducement to farmers to cut every available ton. Until last year this hay could be bought here on the streets at harvest time at prices ranging about $5 per ton, and later when thoroughly dried and baled much of it was sold at $8, but recently it has been selling here at prices up to $18 and $20.
